The sphere is a specialized projection screen created by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) and used by NASA primarily as a presentation tool. The project’s goal was to create datasets, which are a collection of media files, particularly about remote sensing, rendered into a final video to be displayed on the sphere. Some uses of remote sensing include gathering satellite data on: AOD, CO, water vapor and fires.