

Alumni Spotlight

What have you been doing since graduation?

I did an internship at NASA over the summer helping to make graphics/animations, explaining the new space program to high school kids. In the Fall I started Grad school at Kent State pursuing an MFA in Visual Communication Design. I will be graduating this May.

How did the Honors Program help prepare you for success?

One of the biggest strengths of the Honors Program is all the great people that you get to meet. The community that I was able to form with the faculty and fellow students gave me a supportive environment in which to think and grow.

Do you have any advice for current Honors students?

Work hard. A good work ethic will always pay off. Also, take the time to get to know the people around you. There is something to be learned from everyone!

What is your dream?

My professional dream is doing work that has positive effects and eventually teaching the next generation of designers.
