

CLEVELAND STATE UNIVERSITY DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

Description

Over 9,000 adults enroll in more than 800 seminars, workshops, short courses, and conferences offered by the Division of Continuing Education each year. The division offers non-credit programs in several major areas: business and management, computers and information technology, hazardous materials and emergency preparedness, nursing and health/human services, engineering and construction, landscape horticulture, and English as a Second Language. Programs enable adults to keep up-to-date in their professions, acquire new knowledge, develop new skills, and enter new careers. Classes are offered at times and places convenient to adults, including off-campus sites. The division also offers custom-designed programs for business, industry, government, health care, and community organizations.

Continuing Education Units of credit (CEU's) are awarded for continuing education program participation. Certificates are awarded for in-depth study in specific specialty areas, such as Web design or employee benefits.

Charge to the Continuing Education Visiting Committee

The CSU Board of Trustees approved the establishment of the Visiting Committee for Continuing Education on November 20, 2002. The purpose of the visiting committee is to give guidance and support to the Division of Continuing Education in its mission as a major educational outreach unit of Cleveland State University. Specifically, the Visiting Committee will:

- Develop a continuing knowledge of the mission, programs, priorities, challenges and needs of the Division of Continuing Education.
- Provide advice and support to the dean and staff about the division's programs, faculty, marketing, client development and outreach.
- Support and promote the work of the division, assisting in increasing its external visibility and developing new partnerships.
